

Mobile homes evolve: Fewer but larger

While the overall number of occupied mobile homes in the U.S. has been slightly decreasing after reaching a peak in 2001, more people are opting to live in more spacious units with three or more bedrooms.

SOURCE: U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development